General Housing Information

Room and board are the responsibility of each graduate student, and costs are NOT included in the tuition. However, housing assistance is available through SIT. This document outlines recommended options, but students can find their own housing if preferred.

HOW IS HOUSING ARRANGED?

In both locations, students have two options for housing:

- Homestays with SIT-vetted families allow for greater cultural and linguistic immersion and lower costs. Breakfast and dinner are provided each day. Homestays also require that students be comfortable with greatly reduced personal space and the need to respect family rules including possible curfews. All homestays include a private room that locks and Wi-Fi access. Students may share bathrooms with other family members.
- Apartments - This option provides limited cultural and linguistic immersion and involves higher costs, as well as greater independence and personal space. Students are responsible for all their own meal preparation. Students are responsible for locating and confirming their apartments; SIT will provide recommended neighborhoods that are both close to the study centers and safe, and our staff are happy to review some possible listings in advance. Students also will have the opportunity to connect with other cohort members in advance to discuss possible apartment shares.
- During orientation, the program director and housing coordinator will take students on a tour of the available options which they will then be able to secure by the end of the orientation depending on preference.
- For questions about housing in Jordan, students may reach out to Bayan Abdulhaq: layan.abdulhaq@sit.edu.
- For questions about housing in Morocco, students may reach out to Et-tibari Bouasala: ettibari.bouasla@sit.edu.

ACCOMMODATIONS DURING ORIENTATION & FIELD VISITS

Students will share a double room with another classmate. The program covers the cost of meals, accommodations, and transportation during orientations and excursions.
